

James C. Finley Center for Private Forests is housed at Penn State University. It engages in a wide range of applied research projects related to forest management. In addition, it offers educational programs and outreach to students, forest landowners, the forest-products industry, loggers, conservation districts, agencies, land trusts, nongovernmental organizations and the public. Particularly useful for landowners are the webinars as well as the Forest Leaves newsletter. Every two years the Center hosts a Forest Landowners Conference. The Center offers a wealth of information at little or no cost to woodland owners.

Web site: www.ecosystems.psu.edu/research/centers/private-forests